PREFACE

This book came into being when I found two different sets of Dudley Cemetery Records in the Manuscript Department at the New England Historic & Genealogical Society in Boston, MA. Later I found one on the Perryville Cemetery done by Mrs. Helen Winslow Mansfield. I knew that Roger Alton (now deceased) and Charles Moseley had done work in some of the cemeteries in 1982, and he was kind enough to let me have a copy. I decided to go back in Corbin, Village, Marsh and Waldron cemeteries to check the data and add the new stones since 1982.

Thank you to Maureen Bounds who so graciously let me copy the burial records and Priscilla Butler who helped me with the inscriptions in the Corbin Cemetery. She could read some that I couldn't and without her help it would have taken me much longer to complete.

INSCRIPTION ON THE WHITE MONUMENT
IN DUDLEY
(near Quinebaug Village)

To The Memory
of Aaron White son of Aaron & Mary White
born Oct. 8, 1798
died Apr. 15, 1886

"Squire White," as he was locally known, was a most eccentric character in his day. He is said to have been concerned in the Dorr Rebellion in Rhode Island, and was compelled to fly from the State. He was a lawyer of considerable repute, and a more than ordinarily smart man, but in his old age he became an eccentric old miser, and dressed very strangely, and hoarded all his wealth in his cellar in pennies. I am told by those who saw what they speak of, that after his death, several tons of pennies were found in his cellar and home, with perhaps other money, and that they were shipped to New York and two freight cars were loaded with them. His monument is a large granite marker, four feet or more high, with a large black marble slab affixed to it in front by iron clasps, and around the lot is a heavy granite curbing about 20 feet square. It stands alone in a pasture, near the railroad leading from Quinebaug to West Dudley and near the State Line.

Inscription on a gravestone in a small burial lot located on the line which runs between the towns of Charlton and Dudley, MA. The line runs between the graves of Isaac Chase and his wife, as it was their desire to be buried each in their native town. The inclosure is in a pasture on the old Davis Darling farm, about midway between Baker (or Gore) and Blood Ponds.

Isaac Chase died June 16, 1850 age 78 yrs
Anna Chase, his wife, died Apr. 16, 1850 age 78 yrs

CURTIS CEMETERY
on Durfee Road at Albee Road
Copied by Roger Alton & Charles Moseley
1982

This early neighborhood cemetery in Dudley has grave stones dating back to the late seventeenth hundreds. As of December 1982 there are approximately 95 stones remaining. I have a feeling that some early stones are now missing from the usual weathering, breakage and possible removal. There are some fragments of stones on the front wall. The name Curtis comes from the family who lived nearby on the old Meyers farm. The listing is started from the N.W. corner, then moving toward the opposite S. E. at the road intersection. H.R.A. Note: Sometime between 1982 and before 1995 most of the stones disappeared.

Henry Marsh Road

Copied by Roger Alton & Charles Moseley in 1982

Corrected and added to by Marilyn Labbe in June 2002

This small neighborhood cemetery is situated in the very N. E. corner of Dudley, almost on the Oxford line. The old lane bordered by stone walls, that passed by the west side of this cemetery, has now become part of the open fields. Most of the burials here were Marshes (28) and Uphams (21). Isaac Moffit, whose tomb is in the N. E. corner, was an early settler of nearby Oxford, born 4 Sep. 1739, died 26 Aug. 1812. His wife, Sarah Larned, died 23 Sep. 1822 age 84y. There are no dates on the tomb door. In June of 2002 there are stones missing and some are broken and laying down in pieces.

Corrected and Added to by Marilyn Labbe in 2001

In the Dudley Vital Records this yard is referred to as the "New Cemetery". There are no 18th century graves and most of them date from the 1830 period on into the early 1900's. There are approximately 480 burials as of 1982. During the horse and buggy days a hearse shed stood at the SW corner. This was available for funerals. Each family would supply or hire a horse. This shed was removed when funeral directors came into the picture and they supplied the necessary hearse and funeral hacks. The cemetery is arranged in four long sections running north and south. The listing of graves is taken beginning at the north ends. Section 1 is immediate to the street. Several stones are already very indistinct and therefore the possibility of errors in both spelling and dates exist.
